Talkin' Sex at the Augustana Chapel

Mark Evans

THE DAGLIGHTALE

The Augustana Students' Union brought author, lecturer, and host of the Rock Radio Network's "The Sunday Night Sex Show" Sue Johanson to campus on January 25 to tell Augustana students everything they ever wanted to know about their favourite subject, sex. Sue appeared in the Chapel before approximately 350 students to speak and to answer questions.

Sue began her presentation by explaining why in her opinion sex is the most neglected aspect of our lives. She maintains that since birth we have been taught by parents, teachers, and society that we are not supposed to speak about sex. Sue, however, could not be any more open and frank in discussing sex. Sue emphasized the need for people to be aware of and know their bodies. It is with this knowledge and open communication that the best sex can occur.

Sue expressed her grave fears about sexually transmitted diseases, especially Chlamydia. She stated that Chlamydia is reaching almost epidemic proportions and by the year 2000 50% of American women will be sterile due to Chlamydia. Chlamydia exhibits no symptoms, affects both male and female and when left untreated will result in sterility.

One question for Sue asked if a homophobic person was likely to exhibit homosexual tendencies. Sue replied by stating, "homosexuality is not a choice, a person is born homosexual" and that a "homophobic is lacking knowledge and is afraid to get it." Another question asked, "If you masturbate every day for 3-4 years will it lessen sexual performance or is it just weird?" Sue had answered this question in the presentation when she stated "99% of males masturbate and the other 1% are liars" and that as far as sexual potency was concerned "your hand would give out before your sperm will give out." One individual asked what to do about a roommate who was always having sex in their dorm room while they were trying to sleep. Sue suggested talking to the individual to end this situation and failing that to tie a bell to their mattress.

Sue feels that people have put too much pressure on themselves about sexual performance which causes problems when open communication is what is needed. Sue explained that "bigger is not better" and that female orgasm is achieved through clitoral stimulation rather than vaginal stimulation, dispelling some misconceptions that exist about sex.

Sue ended her discussion with a demonstration of proper use of the condom and of the new female condom. While she did this she explained that their is no "safe sex" only safer sex.

Sue provided this information that all people present should have had in Junior high from their parents or from school. However in school we were too busy learning important things about life, like how to build bird houses in Industrial Education and our parents were probably hoping that we would never discover sex until our late thirties. Sue's open discussion of sex was humorous and informative as demonstrated by the attention she held of the people present.

Students Discuss the Future of Their Union

Mark Evans

THE DAGLIGHTALE

The Augustana Students' Union held the "Mirror Lake Accord" to discuss the Students' Union Constitution and other issues facing the Students' Union. Its goal was to feedback from a cross section of Augustana students about how they would like to see the Union organized and operated. VP-Internal Stacy Prochnau, Over 25 rep Michael Henkel and Sharifa Riddett organized the two-day event that was held on January 21-22.

Mr. Carl Gillis, National Chair of the Canadian Federation of Students (CFS) spoke to the 35-40 students who attended the meetings. Mr Gillis spoke of his introduction into student politics and the changing role of Students' Unions across Canada and the important role of CFS. He described the transformation of Students' Unions from what was a body that primarily organized events for students in the 1950s to bodies that, as a result of funding cuts in the 1980s, began providing the services that had been cut and became politically active in advocating the concerns of students.

The remainder of the evening was a visioning workshop facilitated by Mr. Tony Norrad, a recent graduate of Mount Allison University and soon to be student at the Atlantic School of Theology where he will pursue a Masters Degree in Divinity. He had the participants envision what the perfect Students' Union would be like, and what problems stand in the way of Augustana students achieving their perfect Students'

Union.

Saturday, former Students' Union President, Daglightale editor, Off Campus rep and the present National Treasurer of CFS, Sandra Rein, gave an engrossing discussion of the role of a Constitution. This was followed by a conflict resolution workshop again facilitated by Mr. Norrad.

In the afternoon, the large group broke into three separate groups to discuss Constitution, Policy and Fee Allocation. The groups discussed ideas to improve these areas of the Students' Union. The main goal of most of the suggestions was to promote more unity and participation between students and their Union. Possibilities about restructuring Council were discussed as were the relation of such bodies of the Students Union as RHC and OCC. A need to resolve perceived problems with University Administration was expressed, as were concerns about the issue of autonomy.

The ideas discussed here were given to the Constitution and By-Law Committee who are presently formulating changes that will need to be ratified by students at the annual General Meeting that will be held in early February.

Prochnau Does It Again -- Trip Dance a Success

Mark Evans

THE DAGLIGHTALE

Three hundred Augustana Students turned out for the Trip Dance on January 15, for groping and sucking face to cheesy sickening love songs. However, if you were able to ignore the sounds of panting and tongues slapping together from the dance floor it was an awesome event.

Augustana Students did a ton o' dancing, but unfortunately there was no country music or Budweiser girls. Notable attendees were Lester B. Pearson, Joseph Stalin, Gandhi, Abraham Lincoln, Adolf Hitler and Winston Churchill. They engaged in a rousing discussion about collective security and oppression over a few beers then did some dancing, hit on a few people, trashed the washrooms, and took a free cab ride home that the Students' Union provided.

At midnight the draw for the trip was made to the land of collapsed freeways, California, and the mecca of hedonistic materialism, Disneyland. Andrea Taeger won the trip, Marianne Peta won a cordless phone, Jody Manchester won a color television, and some person unbeknownst to us won a CD Walkman.

The Trip Dance was well attended and everyone had a "good time" and no one got pregnant (that we know of). VP-Internal Stacy Prochnau once again demonstrated her amazing abilities to single handedly put on fun, successful and safe events for the students of Augustana.

The part about Pearson et al above, is not exactly true, however some future leader and servant did trash the washroom.

Council Censures Bratvold and Uzelman

Mark Evans

THE DAGLIGHTALE

The failings of two members of the Students' Union Executive were brought to light at the first Students' Council meeting. Numerous problems with the ticket sales and at the bar occurred due to President Micheal Bratvold and Tyler Uzelman, who were to manage these areas, leaving to go to Tom Katz.

The neglect of their roles at the Trip Dance left VP-Internal Stacy Prochnau attempting to manage the entire event on her own. Various infractions occurred in the sale of liquor tickets and at the bar. Stacy Prochnau stated that the event "lost money due to these facts." The lack of insurance for the event however was a more pressing problem. While Stacy Prochnau took responsibility for the oversight she felt that had she had better support from Bratvold and Uzelman, such mistakes would not have been made.

When asked for a response as to why they left the Trip Dance to go to the Bar, neglecting the roles that they said they would fulfil, not to mention how unimpressive it must have looked to other students seeing that the Executive were not supporting their own event, both Bratvold and Uzelman refused to answer, stating that anyone who wanted a response could speak to them after the meeting. It was only after a motion was made and passed by Council requiring them to respond did they offer a reason. Micheal Bratvold stated that he "wanted to go dance and see the Budweiser Girls." Tyler Uzelman said they were not playing enough country music at the Trip Dance.

A motion to censure was made against the President Micheal Bratvold and VP- Finance Tyler Uzelman. The motion was passed (with the only vote opposed being Mr. Uzelman's) demonstrating the strong disapproval of Council for their actions.

THE DAGLIGHTALE

You finally thought it was safe to open the Daglightale and not have to read vast amounts of text discussing how the administration has yet again tried to undermine your duly elected Students' Union. Unfortunately it isn't. During the week before the Trip Dance, members of the Administration took it upon themselves to involve themselves with the purchase of the alcohol for the event.

On Monday, January 10, Mark Chytracsek, Director of Residence Life, contacted Stacy Prochnau, VP Internal, to get the details of the event, specifically in whose name the Liquor licence was held.

Prochnau responded that the licence was being held by the Canadian Federation of Students (Alberta).

The following day Mr. Chytracsek contacted all three Liquor Stores in Camrose to inform them of Augustana's Alcohol Policy.

what Mr. Chytracsek had done two days before. When Harley's Liquor Store was contacted by the Daglightale, Trevor Carlson at Harley's confirmed that this conversation did take place, but refused to confirm or deny whether Mr. Pinno had requested that alcohol not be sold to the Students' Union for the purposes of hosting the Trip Dance. Mr. Chytracsek, when asked, emphatically denied that the purpose

"Anyone who believes the Administration's lame story has got their head in the sand."
Stacy Prochnau, VP-Internal, ASU

which states that Augustana does not hold events in which alcohol is served.

The event of Thursday, January 13 however has descended into an odd, but all too common, vagueness. The VP- Student Services, Erhard Pinno, according to Administration, went to Harley's Liquor Store where the Alcohol was being purchased, to repeat of the visit was an attempt to have the liquor withheld from the Students' Union.

VP- Internal Stacy Prochnau declared, "Anyone who believes the Administration's lame story has got their head in the sand. We know that Mr. Pinno went to the Liquor Store and demanded that they not turn over the alcohol for the Trip Dance."

THE DAGLIGHTALE

Wow! What a busy month! It seems that we have done as many activities this month as we did all last semester.

The turnout for the Trip Dance was fabulous. 300 AUG students turned out and danced up a storm. The average drink per student ratio was 4.1, unfortunately the event ended early due to the frigid weather. Congratulations to Andrea Taege who won the trip for two to Disneyland.

The following weekend the Mirror Lake Accord took place. Augustana Students came out and made some excellent recommendation on how we could change our constitution and bylaws, policy manual, and fee allocation. Carl Gillis chairperson of the Canadian Federation of Students was here to make a presentation on why schools have Student Unions and some of the major things Unions do. Thank-you to all the students that gave up a weekend to come out and make a difference. Your input was greatly appreciated.

Sue Johanson was on campus this past Wednesday and about 400 students showed up to laugh and learn with Sue. The presentation was not only informative but also very interesting. Thanks to all who helped clean up following the presentation.

February 10 the Snow Queen and Snow King Talent show will be taking place. All students who are interested in doing a song/dance/comedy/etc please come up to the main office and drop-off your name and phone number. I am also still accepting names for our Ski Trip. We almost have a bus full so hurry if you're intending to go.

Simon B. Cotter will be on Campus February 18 at noon in the Coffee House. He is Canada's funniest man, and is sure to keep you laughing non-stop.

THE DAGLIGHTALE

Hello fellow students, and welcome back to another semester of Augustana, it's been awhile since we talked... For those of you who haven't yet heard, the 1993-94 student Directories are in and can be picked up at the Students' Union Main Office. The only pre-requisite is that you know how to sign your name. Speaking of signing names, I would like to thank all those students who took the time out of their lunch break to sign petitions calling the Provincial Government to WAKE UP to what students want and need. And for those of you who said you would come back after lunch to sign and never did, I have a few words for you: "Thanks a lot for your precious time" (NOT).

There has been brief discussion between myself and a certain member of faculty about hosting a forum on our campus which will focus on how to deal with the recent and upcoming budget cuts to education. (Yes students, it WILL affect you too). We would hope to have attendance by students, faculty, staff and administration so that we can all become familiar with how the budget cuts will affect all the components of this institution. It has even been proposed that an invitation be extended to our MLA, Ken Rostad, Justice Minister and Attorney General of the Provincial Government. The Plans are still "up in the air," but if you are interested in seeing this kind of event happen, let me know! (F210).

The Students Council is thinking about ordering jackets for all students who are interested. If you're in the market for a new jacket come up to the main office and leave your name. If enough interest is shown, the council will do a block order.

Lastly, I would like to congratulate Stacy Prochnau, Shariffa Ridet and Michael Henkel for a successful "Mirror Lake Accord" weekend. Good Job!

Talk to you in a couple weeks!

Tyler Uzelman
VP Finance

THE DAGLIGHTALE

Welcome back! I hope that everyone had a productive or not so productive holiday break. (Depends on what you wanted). At the present point in time I am beginning the procedure of preparing for our annual audit. (Fun times are ahead!)

Also, for all grads of 94 you have received a letter from myself with your marks. I am your student rep. on the Convocation Steering Committee, so if you have any questions, comments or ideas please let me know.

The Alcohol policy review committee is also still active and has come to the conclusion that it wants to preserve an alcohol free environment all over campus (In residence and in non-residence). We are now steering our efforts on off campus events.

If you have any questions on the fiances please feel free to come upstairs to the Students' Union offices and sit down and talk. The number is 679-1541 and my name is still Tyler Uzelman.

THE DAGLIGHTALE

Greetings!

How time flies! Once again, we'll have the opportunity to get our hands on that great masterpiece of journalism, The Daglightale. In turn, I find myself wondering what to include in my President's Report.

Although it's a new year, there are some issues which remain the same. The Alcohol Policy Review Committee continues to review Augustana's present alcohol policy. Good progress is being made, and I believe it is quite likely the policy will be modified in some fashion for next year. The Autonomy Committee, which is examining how the relationship between the S.U. and the AUG administration can be improved, is doing some really good work. I believe a process and even a framework, has been established from which to work from.

Much of this semester will be spent reviewing and revamping the Students' Union Constitution. I will be chairing a Constitution and Bylaws Committee which will be trying to incorporate student concerns into a new, codified Constitution. If you have any suggestions as to what the Constitution should possibly address, please come and see me. We want to have (and will have) this document completed and reviewed by the general student body before the March meeting of the Board of Regents (March 4-5).

I am sure you have noticed the numerous posters, the S.U. is looking to fill three positions: OFF CAMPUS REP, 2ND YEAR REP, and 3RD YEAR REP. If you are interested in representing any one of these three groups, please come and talk to me or call 679-1541.

Good Luck With the semester.

Celebrating Homosexuality

Sandeep Dhir

THE DAGLIGHTALE

On February 14th many of us will send cards, flowers, or chocolates to those we care about. We will send notes of love, begin anticipating the return of spring and the end of winter. All will seem right in the world.

However, February 14th is also Pink Triangle Day. This is a day designated to increase awareness about homosexuality. Why a pink triangle? The pink triangle has been adopted by the Gay community as their symbol in memory of the persecution that gays and lesbians underwent in Nazi Germany. In the same way that members of the Jewish community were forced to wear a yellow star of David to identify themselves, gays and lesbians were forced to wear a pink triangle. Today our society recognizes that the atrocities committed against Jews were horrific and morally wrong. Unfortunately, some in our society have not recognized that prejudice against gays and lesbians is based on the same type of ignorance that Hitler utilized against the Jews.

Today in Alberta, a man or woman may be fired from their job or evicted from their home purely on the basis of their sexual orientation. Why? Because our Alberta government does not believe that gays and lesbians require protection under the human rights protection code which already provides protection for visible minorities against racism and for women against sexism.

Positively Pink

THE BRUNSWICKAN

Try to imagine heterosexuality being the exception in society. Imagine that every book, every film, every TV show, every newspaper was telling you that YOU should be homosexual. Sure, there are the occasional films or shows that have taken homosexuals on them but, the heterosexuals they portray are almost always shown in a degrading manner. Consider that society thinks heterosexuals are deviants, pervers, child molesters and incapable of having a lasting, loving relationship.

Think about losing your job, your apartment, your friends, your family and being denied basic services simply because you choose to love someone of the opposite sex. Think about not being able to legally marry the one you love or visit them in the hospital if they're sick. Try to imagine what it would be like to walk down the street with the person you love and not dare to hold hands or kiss because you know that at the very least it will provoke a verbal attack and, at the extreme, a physical one. Think about not being able to volunteer to work with children because, as everyone knows, you'll

More Than Just Valentine's Day

In a similar vein, in many provinces there is a growing conflict between those who would like to see the gay lifestyle taught in classrooms and those who argue that this inclusion in the sexual education curricula would cause so-called "normal" heterosexual oriented children to become gay or lesbian. This last bastion of our society's morality argues that exposure to the ideas of homosexuality will corrupt the minds of innocent children. The reality is that our society contains members who are homosexual -- some statistics indicate up to 10% of our society are gay or lesbian. That means over 100 students at Augustana are gay or lesbian. Would it not make sense then to learn about a lifestyle that so many people practice? After all, nobody challenges the teaching of Stalin's murder of millions of Cossacks as likely to teach children to commit murder. Or the teaching of slavery as likely to cause children to believe that African-Canadians are a lower form of human being. No, the only real reason for the opposition to protection for homosexuals under the law or the teaching of it in classrooms is homophobia -- that is a bigoted belief based on ignorance and defended through citation of Biblical scripture. One might note that South Africans defended apartheid by quoting scripture as well. At this point it seems appropriate to ask where in the Bible does it say "fire your neighbour, throw him/her out of his/her home and persecute him/her (including physical harm) knowing that it is God's will." I challenge anyone to find such a passage. Yet, this is exactly what people do.

We are taught to "Love thy neighbour" -- I suspect that means love your neighbour all the time no matter what. If you think homosexuality is gross and disgusting, that's fine, it's your opinion. I suspect that some gays and lesbians find the idea of heterosexual lovingmaking to be equally unappetizing. Notwithstanding any of this, why would we want to condone the persecution of people whose only crime is to be in love? Anyone within our community who opposes the inclusion of protection for gays and lesbians under the existing human rights legislation is as guilty as the marauding bands of red-necks who actually take baseball bats and go on a "flag bash." For it makes no difference whether you were actually holding the bat or just used to making it morally wrong to use that bat. February 14th is a time to reflect on the injustices that occur in our society with our blessings.

Take It From The Source

*I was sitting in Basile's with a friend and coffee Thinking the world a fine place to be
When the man on my right got up to leave
And left a little piece of his mind with me
He said, "Faggots like you should be put in asylums"
Now tell me, who takes the blame
For his being scared, so unwise
That he would fire his feet without an ounce of shame
Whatever happened to love thy neighbour?
Nothing more than a worn out cliché
Are all men created equal or has this too become passe?
You don't need to open your mouth for me to read your lips
I can follow the language displayed on your fingertips*

*They don't look before they leap
They don't think before they speak
They just sharpen their tongues on you and me
Spit poison words between perfect teeth
You've got to take it from the source
Look at where it's coming from
You've got to take it from the source
They're only wasted words on me*

*I guess I just don't measure up
Stayed from the straight and narrow road
So you look me up throw away the key
'Cause I don't live by your dress code
That's OK, I've heard it before
You can open the wound I feel no pain
I don't need an anamn suit
You're the one with the ball and chain*

Heterosexual Questionnaire

recruit or molest them. Worse yet, think about losing custody of your own kids because you lead an immoral life. Imagine for one instant that you are the minority and answer the following questions:
1) What do you think caused your homosexuality?
2) When and how did you first decide you were a heterosexual?
3) Is it possible your heterosexuality is just a phase you may grow out of?

4) Is it possible your heterosexuality stems from a neurotic fear of others of the same sex?
5) If you've never slept with a person of the same sex, is it possible that all you need is a good Gay lover?
6) To whom have you disclosed your heterosexual tendencies? How did they react?
7) Why do you heterosexuals feel compelled to seduce others into your lifestyle?

8) Why do you insist on flaunting your heterosexuality? Can't you just be what you are and keep it quiet?
9) What would you want your children to be heterosexual, knowing the problems they'd face?
10) A disproportionate majority of child molesters are heterosexual. Do you consider it safe to expose your children to heterosexual teachers?
11) Why do heterosexuals place so much emphasis on sex?
12) Could you trust a heterosexual therapist to be objective? Don't you feel they might be inclined to influence you in the direction of their leanings?

13) How can you become a whole person if you limit yourself to compulsive, exclusive, heterosexuality, and fail to develop your natural, healthy, homosexual potential?

14) There seem to be very few happy heterosexuals. Techniques have been developed which enable you to change if you really want to. Have you considered trying aversion therapy?

I hope you recognize how ridiculous, unnecessary and unfounded these questions are in relation to you and the way you feel about your heterosexuality. Unfortunately, these are the types of questions, attitudes and the reality that gay/bi/lesbian people face everyday of their lives.

As an openly gay person I refuse to live my life in fear of what people might think or do. It is my hope that by being open about who I am and who I love will give some heterosexuals a positive image of homosexuality and reduce some of their unfounded fears.

The Death Penalty -- Society's Protection

David Kawalaskas

THE DAGLITALE

Man as a general rule perceives himself to be an organism who participates in, is nurtured by, and is a part of that structured organization we call society. This aggregation of individuals into a defined configuration is a logical outgrowth of primitive cultures, in which early man found he could best overcome the rigours of predators and climate by co-operating with others of his kind. An extension of this commonality of purpose was the relinquishing of certain freedoms and avenues of conduct that are open to the individual, but that would bring harm to the collective.

This restriction of action later became codified in the laws and ethical structures that we have today. One of the acts rendered taboo by law, religion and society is the deliberate, conscious termination of the existence of another human being... the act more commonly referred to as premeditated murder. The reason for this prohibition is found in a desire for self-preservation, not on the part of the individual, but of society. I do not seek to grant society the status of a self-aware organism that in and of itself makes decisions, however, were society to permit it's component members to kill one another without restriction, there could very swiftly be no society at all from sheer attrition. Thus, the laws and morals that decry murder as an illegal and evil act.

Having said this, the question arises, "So what happens when these laws and morals are violated?" In this country, there are three answers: if the offending party is an adult and found guilty by a duly-convened trial, the result is incarceration for a period ranging from 25 years to the balance of the convicted murderer's natural life. For someone between the ages of 12 and 16 years who is brought to trial under the Young Offenders Act, the maximum sentence possible is two years, and if the malefactor in question is younger than 12 years, then no trial (and hence, no prison sentence) can occur.

For some time debate has raged over which, if any, of these avenues of negative reinforcement are the best possible options available for society. I would argue that none of them truly serve society. Since the turn of the century, the percentage of convicted criminals (both those sequestered within the penal system and those released), who later committed another crime has been on the rise. As recidivism is our greatest problem, it brings to light the glaring fact that our justice system is not fulfilling one of it's stated purposes, that being the rehabilitation and reintegration of criminals into main-stream society. The widely-held perception of prisons as training grounds for criminals is thus not without substantiation.

This being the case, an alternative means must be pursued in the attempt to curb criminal activity, particularly violent crime. One option is capital punishment. When one considers the enormous monetary costs involved with keeping a convicted murderer in a maximum-security institution, coupled with the aforementioned problem of recidivism, and the fact that current forms of rehabilitation do not seem capable of dissuading that recidivism, the notion to "kill the killers" becomes more acceptable.

"Society states that murder is the worst possible atrocity that one human being can do unto another. Here it possible to rehabilitate an offender so that they understood the full enormity of their actions, have could that person do anything but kill themselves to escape from their sense of guilt? ... why not save the enormous costs associated with incarcerating and rehabilitating that individual by executing him?"

The most obvious argument against capital punishment is the possibility of accidentally executing a convicted criminal who is in fact innocent. While the incidence of such errors occurring in the judicial system is extremely low, it is nevertheless a possibility, and as such must be addressed.

One cannot simply say "to err is human" and leave it at that. The potential possibility inherent in capital punishment for this most irreversible of errors cannot be dismissed with a casual quotation. Even if the judicial system were solely comprised of dedicated, methodical and cautious judges, prosecutors and police, it is reasonable to assume that a case could arise in which a defendant had motive and opportunity to commit the murder in question, and yet was innocent.

I would personally favour the death penalty only in cases where the evidence, (testimonial, physical and circumstantial,) were overwhelming. A case would have to have been proven to be not only beyond any reasonable doubt, but beyond any doubt. While this proviso would almost certainly limit the use of capital punishment in the extreme, it also the only means of attempting to ensure that justice is actually done.

Another question with capital punishment is what crimes can justify it's use. As a personal belief, I would argue that it would be appropriate to execute arsonists who deliberately and maliciously set fires that result in the deaths of others; rapists who are repeatedly convicted; as well as those convicted of high treason (which is actually still permissible under Canadian law.) As with murderers, the qualification that the case against the suspect would have to be overwhelming would have to be met.

It will probably be asked of me how I can morally advocate the termination of human life. I would answer that question as follows: Society states that murder (and to a lesser degree, rape and treason) is the worst possible atrocity that one human being can do unto another. Were it possible to rehabilitate an offender so that they understood the full enormity of their actions, how could that person do anything but kill themselves to escape from their sense of guilt? If you are willing to accept this argument, then is it so unreasonable to say, why not save the enormous costs associated with incarcerating and rehabilitating that individual by executing him?

The question also arises, "What gives you the right to play God?" How can I do anything but play at God, having been made in His image? When two people conceive a child, are they not playing at being God through emulating His act of creation? The universe goes on changing and unfolding everyday, so it safe to say that God has not stopped creating...and destroying. Why should I?

I am willing to accept the risks inherent in capital punishment, if only because the alternative is the imprisonment of individuals, who if released or escaped from prison, pose the real threat of perpetrating their ravages on society anew. Would you care to be the person with the sad duty of going to a person and saying, "I'm sorry, but Criminal X, while escaped/on day parole, has murdered/raped your son/daughter/wife/husband/friend?"

I know I would never want to be in that situation.

The Death Penalty -- Looking For an Easy Way Out

Sandeep Dhir and
Trent Clark

THE DAGLIGTALE

In the early years of history in our Euro-Christian society, we lived by a creed that included "Thou shalt not kill". On this basis, our less civilized ancestors put to death anyone breaking the laws of their society. Today, the last vestiges of Homo-Erectus still cling to the theory that capital punishment is a solution to the problem of crime. You may recognize these neandrathals (they tend to be members of the Reform Party), and occasionally can speak in complete sentences. The fact that they can walk on their hind legs should not fool you, they have freed their hands only to create more effective tools with which to kill. These are the same people who believe that building more nuclear weapons is a good idea and that Pat Buchanan is a great democrat who supports true equality. The people who support capital punishment decry the cancelling of the Brady Bunch and get their news from the National Enquirer and Hustler magazine. These people tend to agree with the Alberta Government's decision not to send K.D. Lang a congratulatory note when she won a Grammy Award—in other words they are right-wing regressive, reactionary and uneducated.

studies in the United States and other Western countries have reinforced this conclusion.

The idea that capital punishment will stop rapists or child molesters is also naive and simplistic. First, a child molester is mentally women are nothing more than meat. Does it not make sense that in a case of date rape (date rape makes up over 80% of all rapes) we treat the socialization and thereby eliminate the crime completely? Well, our friend on the "Point" side thinks that every 16 year old who commits date rape should be killed. I suspect if this thinking became law a lot of men on this campus would be looking over their collective shoulders. Further, the idea that "recidivism is our greatest problem" is patently false. In the United States a disproportionate number of crimes are committed by African-Americans. Is this because African-Americans as a race are more likely to commit murder? Of course not. Not coincidentally African-Americans are also among the poorest people in America. Is it surprising that these people turn to crime, when they have no hope of ever receiving a quality education or a well-paying job. In Canada, many of the criminals in our jails also come from poorer socio-economic backgrounds. The logical extension of Mr. Kawalaukas' argument is that we should kill all poor people. Heck, why wait until they commit a crime, we know they're going to commit one sooner or later, so let's just line 'em all up and pull the trigger now. With thinking like that, I'm surprised that Mr. Kawalaukas is not a member of the Klein cabinet... wait is that the phone I hear ringing?

they're not even smart enough to be ideologically consistent. I digress.

Arguments suggesting that capital punishment will reduce murder are just not true. After the abolition of capital punishment in Canada the murder rate went down. Similar unbalanced. The premise of capital punishment is that it will work as a deterrent to crime-- yet, this deterrent effect will only work on someone who is sane enough to fear for his/her life. In the case of rapists, studies indicate that rape is a crime of power and based on "socialization" that tells men that idea that "recidivism is our greatest problem" is patently false. In the United States a disproportionate number of crimes are committed by African-Americans. Is this because African-Americans as a race are more likely to commit murder? Of course not. Not coincidentally African-Americans

"No submit that the greatest problem in our society is economic inequality - the true cause of many crimes. So instead of wasting time providing answers which only cure the symptoms of the disease and not the disease itself - the supporters of capital punishment might try to solve the problem of poverty. Maybe while they do they can put their guns away and wait for the weekend hunting trip."

An End of an Era

Mark Heinen

THE DAGLIGTALE

On a Sunday afternoon (likely cloudy) five years ago I arrived on this campus to begin my academic career. That same day, another student arrived here, and has just finished her degree requirements last term. Her importance to the students of this campus cannot go unnoticed. Sandra Rein was the Augustana Students' Union President in 1991/92, then followed that by being a Co-Editor of the Dagligtale last year, was my fellow off-campus rep on Student Council this year, and is currently finishing her second term as National Treasurer for the Canadian Federation of Students. She even returned to the campus last weekend for the Mirror Lake Accord, leading a session on Constitutions and heading up the discussion on our own Constitution and By-laws. Throughout her studies at Augustana, she has always been committed to championing the rights of students, and has earned the admiration of many of those with whom she has worked. She was recognized by Augustana for her leadership roles at last year's Award Ceremony with an Onesimus award, and for her scholastic achievements with scholarships throughout her time here, but her contribution must be recognized once more. Her input this year on the Autonomy and Budget committees has been invaluable, and she has provided a sober second thought on all of Council's actions. Sandra's work on the Dagligtale last year set a new precedent in excellence, easily surpassing previous years, and creating a difficult target for us to reach this year. In the same way, I have seen six different Students' Union Presidents here, and her work as President was easily the most productive, accomplished, and important of any of them.

What worries me the most about

Sandra's leaving, is that what she has fought so hard for will be forgotten. There are not many students left who remember how things were some years ago, and how important it is for us to be able to speak for ourselves. Many people take for granted what we currently have, and are satisfied to remain inactive and content with the status quo. The status quo is only satisfactory when every person is treated fairly and equally, and otherwise we must fight for this. It is time for a new 'Sandra Rein' to step forward and be a servant leader, committed to students and not to their own personal glorification.

Sandra Rein has been one of the bright spots in my time here at Augustana, demonstrating the purpose and goals of this school more ably than those who created them. I would like to thank her for everything that she has done, and wish her all the best, knowing that she'll succeed in whatever she does.

Takin' the Pulse

Shaun Thronsdon

THE DAGLIGTALE

Once again it is time for TAKING THE PULSE. This issue's question is: Would you have sex with a professor of the opposite sex if you were guaranteed a 9 in the course? As you can see by the results only 43% of the people told the truth. I find it very hard to believe that the students of this school have such high morals, when you take into account some of their comments to the question. Several women asked said that they would not do it for a 9, but they would consider it if they got a large sum of money. One male said that the only reason that he would not is because he did not find any of the female professors very attractive. That's not the point, a 9 is a 9 forever, you can work out your feelings of guilt with a therapist that you can now afford because you can now get a decent job.

This question got several people talking, even arguing about whether or not they would tell their boy/girlfriend if they did go through with it. I am glad to hear that people are thinking about the things that they find immoral. In conclusion, I do not want to pass judgement on other people's morals, but I do think that they should be more honest, if only with themselves. If you have not guessed I am one of the people that said Yes, so any interested professors can call me at 672-JUST KIDDING.

Recognizing Date Rape When It Happens

Candida Rifkind

THE STUDENT ADVOCATE

You walk into the campus pub and see a group of women sitting together. You think one of them is really attractive, and you've talked to her a couple of times and get the feeling that she likes you too. You go over and sit down, and notice that she's paying a lot of attention to you and could even be flirting. Everyone's had a couple of beers and is really relaxed, so you figure that it's cool to flirt back with her. You get up to dance, and she's acting like she's really drunk and wants you to hold onto her. So you figure she's definitely interested, and ask her if she wants to leave. She laughs and says that she should stay with her friends, but you know she doesn't want them to think she sleeps around. So you say that you just want to go for a walk, and drag her outside. She's still laughing, and saying that she doesn't even know you and her friends will worry about her. You figure she's too hung up on what her friends think and that she really wants to get together with you. So you convince her to go to your place for another beer. You go to your room, and she's beginning to get really uptight about going back to the bar. So you say that it's okay, because you think she's really attractive and get the same feeling from her. She begins to say that she does like you, but you cut her off with a passionate kiss. Next thing you know you're on the bed and she's saying she doesn't think it's right but you tell her to lighten up. You start making love to her and after you've climbed on top she stops saying anything. After it's over she leaves right away, and when you offer to walk her home she runs down the hallway and tells you not to call her.

It's been a long week of classes, moving in and meeting new people, and you decide to go for a beer with some of the people you're living with. You go to the campus pub, and sit at a table where you can see people coming in. Half an hour later, this guy you think is really attractive walks in, and comes over to your table. He starts talking to you, and you find out that he's really interesting and has a great sense of humour. When you get up to dance you realize that you've had too much to drink, and actually feel kind of sick. He says that you should go outside for some fresh air, and you laugh to make it seem like you're okay. He laughs too, and drags you outside, even though you say that your friends will worry about you leaving.

You've just a p e n t orientation week begin told not to walk alone and to let people know where you are, so you don't want to scare your friends by taking off. When you get outside you feel better, and he suggests going to his place for a beer. You don't really want to, but he's a great guy and you're sure it'll be okay. You get to his place, and he says he wants to show you his room. You say okay, but that you really want to get back to the bar before all your friends leave. Then he says that you're too concerned about what your friends think, and that he thinks you're really attractive. You want to tell him you think he's great, but that it seems like he's moving too fast, when he cuts you off with a forceful kiss. He pushes you down onto the bed and starts taking off your clothes, and you know it's all wrong. You try to say no, but he keeps kissing you and then when he climbs on top he's really heavy and won't let you go. You're really scared and realize that if you say anything he could hurt you. When he's finished, you grab your clothes and leave. He wants to walk you home, but you're terrified of him. He just raped you.

Are these scenarios realistic?

Stop.
Just stop, please!
I can't.
I won't.
Don't ask again.
No. Don't touch me!
I said no!
What part of "no" don't you understand?
You're hurting me.
Please stop.
I can't breathe...
can't scream...
can't cry...
Just stop.
Please, just stop.
Just stop.
You don't love me.
Don't say it.
You don't even know how.
If you loved me you wouldn't hurt me.
The way you're hurting me now.
I loved you...
trusted you...
and now...
Now you've betrayed me...
made me feel cheap...
used...
dirty...
Angry!
It's not my fault.
It's not!
I DID say NO.
No means no.
Stop means stop...
So why didn't you listen?
Why didn't you stop?
You can't just take whatever you want.
It's not fair.
And it hurts.
God, it hurts.
But no one believes me...
They all say you wouldn't... couldn't... because you love me
so much.
You don't...
You never did.

Anonymous Augustana student

Aren't most rapes committed by strangers in dangerous parts of town? If she liked him and kissed him back, wasn't she letting him know she wanted to have sex with him? If she didn't say no and try to defend herself, is it really rape?

Forcing a woman to have sex against her will is called acquaintance rape. It's sexual assault and it's against the law, even if you know her, if she said she likes you, if she's already agreed to kiss you, neck, or pet, if she doesn't fight back, or if she's too drunk to say no.

Acquaintance rape happens to women of all ages and from every cultural, racial, ethnic, religious, and socioeconomic background. In 84% of all attacks, the perpetrator is someone the woman knows. Alcohol is often involved in acquaintance rapes.

But alcohol is not the cause of date rape. violent attitudes towards women are. Alcohol can often bring out these attitudes which range from making sexist jokes, to commenting on a woman's body, to sexual harassment, to sexual assault, and to murder. Sexual assault exists on this continuum of violence against women in a society which degrades women and treats them as sexual objects.

The messages are everywhere: advertisements picture women in bikinis selling cars, little girls are taught to be polite and to not say what they think, we sit in classes where women's contributions are ignored, we go to parties where men who flirt are called "studs" but women who do the same thing are "sluts", and we have a legal system which places as much blame on the women who are raped as it does on the perpetrators.

If this picture seems bleak, it is. But there are things that we can all do to stop violence against women, and to end acquaintance rape forever. Men must learn that it is never okay to force or coerce someone to have sex, to ask and to never assume, to respect another's wishes, to realize that when a woman doesn't want to have sex it's not necessarily a personal rejection, but a specific wish at a specific time, and to listen to "no" - whatever form it takes. Women must learn to always trust their feelings and their instincts, that you have the right to set your own limits, and that you always have the right to say no.

Remember that although orientation weeks are centred around meeting new people, and in many cases partying with them, you don't have to pretend that a group of people who were strangers before are now suddenly friends that you can trust completely. Date rape happens to university and college students, and it is only when we begin to think about it, speak out about it, and change our attitudes and behaviour, that we can begin to stop acquaintance rapes on campus. Everyone has the power to end violence against women.

Then and Now : Sid Zork Revisited

Roger Milbrandt

THE DAGLITALE

There are two kinds of Augustana faculty members: those who remember Sid Zork, and those who don't. Unfortunately, there is only one kind of Augustana student: those who do not remember Sid Zork, or his domitable spirit.

Who was that unmasked non-man anyway?

Sid Zork was the greatest work of fiction ever produced in Camrose. In the late sixties, a few Augustana students (mysteriously, in the late sixties, Augustana students were referred to as CLC students) managed to get the name "Sid Zork" placed on the list of enrolled students. They arranged for the payment of Sid's tuition; they constructed and academic schedule for him; they wrote essays with "Sid Zork" triumphantly typed on the title page; they even sat for his examinations. Contrary to popular belief, guerrilla theatre was vigorously alive then, even with Paul Johnson barely out of diapers.

Of course he was eventually tracked down and proven to be non-existent. But Sid was no quitter. He was not the first philosophy major to learn that he did not exist: nor would he be the last. Anyways, non-existence is only a slight handicap if you make the necessary adjustments. Sid made the necessary adjustments. Disgraced as a student, he became a myth.

On the year Sid Zork rose, declined, and then spectacularly rose again we had a cold, snow-laden winter and in March the campus was still demoralizingly white. (Off-white, to be exact.) Then one morning the campus miraculously turned green. (If you think I'm making any of this up, check with some of the whitening veterans: Gibson, Resor, the O-version of Olson, practically any version of Johnson, and they will remind you of what people are too prone to forget: that everything I write is true). The campus turned green, as I said, and utopia broke out. The presidential version of Johnson declared that Sid Zork's Day had come. In a dazzling flash of creativity he named it "Sid Zork Day." All classes and labs were cancelled. The professors were giddy; the student were delirious; Sid Zork was immortal.

For years afterwards, Sid Zork Day was a floating holiday to be held at some point in the second half of the winter semester. It was announced to the professors on Sid Zork eve and students became aware of it at 8:00 A.M. on the day itself. It was, by far the most important day in the second semester. I, along with many others, postponed every distasteful task until Sid Zork Day. When Sid Zork Day was past, I excused every neglected duty by saying "I fully intended to do it on such and such day but, unfortunately, that's the day Sid Zork was declared."

What astounds me the most about the Sid Zork phenomenon is how distant it now seems. I am convinced this distance is not merely a function of the passage of time. Something beside years separates us from Sid Zork's era.

The sixties were different than the nineties. In the sixties tuition were so low that a few students pooling their resources could reasonably expect to pay for the tuition of a non-existent student. In fact, tuition were so low at this point that one year Concordia College dispensed with tuition altogether in an effort to increase enrolment and the surprising thing is that the move had very little effect.

But it is not just the lowness of tuition costs that distinguishes the sixties from our own period. Look at the Sid Zork story. Notice the high-spirited generosity of the students involved. Notice also the willingness of the president to accommodate himself to this euphoric spirit. This was a different time and the low cost of tuition is an important indicator of this difference but not the sole reason why Sid Zork could flourish in the sixties but not now.

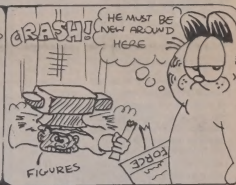

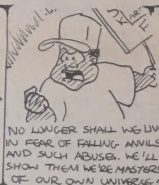

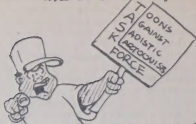

In the sixties we could believe. We could believe that Canadian society was moving towards greater material security and equality of opportunity. The inauguration of our Medicare programme and the dramatic expansion of access to higher education were only the most recent indicators that our belief was justified. In the sixties Canadians who looked across our southern border could believe that the common sense and goodwill of the people of the USA would bring sanity and decency to that country's foreign policy. Or, if we looked as far as Eastern Europe we could see in the Prague Spring of 1968 the harbinger of a future humanization of soviet-based communism. Even the prospect of the third world showed promise.

In the sixties we had no idea that Grinch of fiscal terrorism would steal Christmas from the third world in the eighties, demoralizing its popular leaders and valorizing every manner of fascist thug. We had no idea in the sixties that our own populace would soon be captive to the debt-and-deficit mania which would be used by fiscal terrorists world-wide to budgeon the world's poor and threaten every aspect of the social gains achieved in the western world during this century. We had no idea that Ralph Klien could ever have as much reality as Sid Zork.

Part 4: Secret Obsession

Mercedes' decision not to see Nat any more made her conscience feel much better. She didn't feel so guilty any more because of her obsession with _____ while seeing Nat. _____ just happened to be having romantic problems as well. Helga decided that she was not content with just one man, she had to have two or three... all at the same time. _____ just happened to have slight problem with this. He really liked Helga, and couldn't stand to see her with the other guys that she insisted on going out with. So, _____ was devastated with Helga's decision and wanted to break up with her, but couldn't really tell her that. Finally the day came when Helga told _____ that he just wasn't 'good enough'. He never quite understood just what she meant, but did know that whatever there had been between them was over. He was hurt, basically because it was SHE who dumped HIM; a slight cut to his ego. He was strong, though, and would come to see her as she really was while waiting for a better girl to come along.

Meanwhile, Mercedes and Nat's friendship continued to grow, despite the once sticky situation between them. He understood that she needed her freedom to be by herself and that she still felt something for some other man.

Meanwhile, though all the heartbreak and turmoil was taking place, Mercedes had finally met _____ through a mutual friend. (to be continued...)

Student Services -- the Dag Editors Version

Mark Heinen

THE DAGLITALE

The editors of the Daglitale, want to be in tune with students, as well we felt that we needed to be at one with each other and the universe before beginning to put out this issue. To do this, we embarked on a Dag bonding retreat, and were given a chance to accomplish all of this, plus provide a service to our loyal readers, courtesy of West Edmonton Mall. Putting our personal reputations and livers on the line, we bring to you our rating of the pubs and lounges of West Edmonton Mall. Each establishment received a score out of 10 in four categories: clientele, music, prices, and service.

The remainder of our journey was all on Bourbon Street (how appropriate), a fact that became more appreciated as the day went on. Carlos' had the best service of the day - Anna our waitress with 16 years experience, was impressed with our noble objectives, and told us that the Bourbon St. portion of our day was known as the "Crawl of Death". The music was barely audible over the mumbling of the crowd, but was a nice mix of different types of music. The other patrons were preppy as opposed to tacky, and mostly university age. The prices weren't bad but it was happy hour...

but I don't think I'd be welcomed back if she read this. Finally the place was underpopulated with redneck hicks (no this is not a good thing).

We then found where the leftover hicks from Zambelli's ended up - OW! Scuzz. Then we had to actually leave our corner table under the large screen of country music videos, and walk to the bar, where it still took more than our natural charisma to speed up service. But, the music was OK for country, and the prices were compelling reasons to stay longer.

This was the only place to feature a live musician, doing artistic interpretations of Van Morrison and the Doors, that was actually fairly good. The place was packed with a preppy crowd, but everyone was enjoying the music, having a good time, and spending more than I consider even slightly respectable.

So, West Edmonton Mall can offer something for everyone, from ugly to tacky to preppy to scuzz to redneck to wonderful comical scuzz (as). Just remember to enlist some practical aid to remove you from the premises after happy hours.

This was our first stop on the path to oblivion, and nearly turned our stomachs enough to send us home early. The only other patrons were ugly, tacky tourists, probably tired of their ugly tacky theme room, coming down to pay inflated prices and listen to bad country music (though one may call that redundant). The service wasn't bad, but the waitress was probably so accustomed to those rich ugly tacky tourists, that she was probably unprepared for such wonderful human beings as us, although the camera on the table may have distracted her.

Round 10: Mission accomplished ... and to the victors go the spoils

SPORTS

Cross-Country Skiers -- World Class

Viking Cup Recap

Monica Sahlmank

THE DAGLIGTALTE

Not too many students attending Augustana realize this, but there are world class athletes training and attending school here. You never see them training because they are outside on the ski trails, and you never see their competitions because they aren't held in a facility. These athletes that most people don't know about are the cross country skiers who train up to 550 hours a year to maintain their conditioning throughout the entire year, on or off season. The dedication of these elite cross country skiers is remarkable. Even for those who aren't into sports, some scholastic achievements might not even be comparable.

Cross country skiing isn't a hot spectator sport here in Canada, yet at our school, our skiers (biathlon are included as well) are some of the top ACAC athletes who can take the gold in the provincial championships, and go further for the nationals and even the world leagues. I would like to specifically mention Andreas Dahle and Chad Smith who are at the world Juniors competing right now. They will return February 1st from Austria. Juanita Sutton and Kirk Howell were also expected for the world Juniors but due to illness, neither could attend. These four athletes, including Zoe Clark and Christina Jenkins are competing in the Nationals February 24 to March 1. This ski team takes the Augustana name further each year than any other sport club on campus and gets the least publicity. Therefore this issue is dedicated to those athletes that never give up, and definitely have what it takes.

Before the holiday break there were competitions for the skiers for the World Jr trials, two each in Canmore and Vernon. Saturday's results were promising. Juanita placed 2nd in the 5 km classic race with a time of 15:46. In the Jr Men's 10 km race, Chad Smith had his best race of the series placing 2nd with a time of 26:12. Andreas Dahle claimed 5th with a time of 27:54.

The next day in the Women's Free Technique Juanita Sutton had to settle for 3rd place with a time of 29:32, just behind Gina Loewen from Red Deer College, her main Alberta rival. In the Men's 15 km Chad Smith powered to the front and stayed there to take the gold with a time of 31:03. Andreas Dahle had to settle for 4th with a time of 37:03 after a crash took him off the trail, delaying his finish. All three of the skiers placed high enough to head out for the world trials. Kirk Howell had to sit out of the trials due to an injury, but was still eligible for the world trials based on his last years performance.

The Ole Uffda Ski Gallop, which took place on January 23rd, had AUC's ski team holding the top spot once again easily within reach of yet another ACAC championship. In the College Grande Prix 10k event Marvin Lizotte led the Vikings by placing 2nd with a time of 30:56. Teammates Reint Boelman and Mark Wold followed 3rd and 4th respectively to clinch a team first place finish for AUC.

In the College Grande Prix 5k event for women Juanita Sutton beat out Gina Loewen of Red Deer with a time of 25:45 to take the gold. Zoe Clark and Christina Jenkins followed to take the 3rd and 4th spots for the first placed lady's team.

The next Grande Prix continues on February 5th at Red Deer Loppet with the college championships to be held in conjunction with Athabasca Loppet on February 18 and 19. The Vikings already have a good start and can look forward to dominating the league with more great performances.

A special mention to the Junior Vikings who aren't actually attend our college but still play an integral role on our Vikings cross country ski team. They displayed a superb performance in the Ole Uffda competition as well.

THE DAGLIGTALTE

Welcome back. I hope you had a great Christmas break. Since the last issue of the Dagligtale, the Vikings had six exhibition games of which three were during the Viking Cup. On December 10th the team went to Brooks to play against the Brooks Jr. B Rangers and defeated them 8-1. The following night the team travelled to Selkirk and faced off against the Russians, winning the game 7-5. On December 27th, the Vikings hosted the Minnesota Augsburg Auggies from our southern neighbour and defeated them 6-3.

The Augustana Viking's Hockey team was kept busy hosting the Viking Cup, in which teams from Russia, Dauphin, Manitoba, Czechoslovakia, Finland, Sweden, Augsburg College USA, Mount Royal Cougars and the Vikings participated. Russia won the gold medal, Dauphin took the silver and the Mount Royal Cougars took the bronze. The Vikings placed fifth in the tournament, although in a skills competition during the tournament, our Vikings took first place. The Viking Cup tournament started on December 29th and went until January 4th.

The first action for the Vikings during the Viking Cup was against Finland, winning 10-5. The Vikings didn't do as well against the Dauphin Jr A Kings. The Vikings lost the game 5-3. The last game was against the Russians, where the Vikings were defeated 15-3.

The Vikings started the ACAC competition again on January 8th and 9th against the SAIT Trojans in Calgary. The Vikings lost the first game in an overtime heartbreaker; the score was 6-5. Goal scorers for the game were Jay Robertson with 2, Maury Jackson, Peter Jas, and Derek Robinson each with one. The next afternoon our Vikings came back to win by a score of 8-3. Jay Robertson scored 3, Dean Holcien with 2, Maury Jackson, Keith Mackintosh, and Bob Charchan with a goal each.

On January 21st and 22nd the Vikings Hockey team hosted the Mount Royal Cougars, the first place team in the ACAC league, and made out of the weekend splitting the series. On Friday the Vikings upset the Cougars, winning by a score of 4-2. The Cougars took a two goal lead by scoring 24 seconds into the game and again at 4:32 in the first period. After that Pat Mackintosh stood his ground, shutting out the remaining Cougar attacks. Pat Mackintosh received honorable mention by the ACAC Athletes of the Week January 17-23. Pat managed to stop 47 shots on goal to help the team win. The Vikings scored at 12:55 with a goal from Dean Holcien, then another goal at 15:41 by Derek Robinson. The Vikings won the game, scoring twice in the third period, Peter Loden at the 10:20 and an empty-netter by Maury Jackson at 19:41. On Saturday the Vikings and Cougars faced off again, and this time the Cougars came out with the upper hand, winning 5-1. The Vikings only goal was scored by Bob Charchan at the 19:20 mark of the first period.

The next games for the Vikings are at Concordia, while the next home game is Friday, February 4th against the NAIT Ooks at 8pm. The Vikings are currently 8th in the ACAC's ahead of Concordia Thunder, and still within reach of the ACAC finals.

Biathlon -- Shooters at Large

THE DAGLIGTALTE

Sports - something we do for recreation. What then, you might ask, is the point of having a sport like biathlon? I mean really, who would want to go out, ski for 10 k then shoot at some metal targets just for fun? Well Cindy Brunjten, Nikki Keddie, Madeline Bouz, Carlos Settle, Hardy Griesbauer, and I do it almost every day. In fact Hardy and I moved here from PEI, while Nikki moved from Toronto just to compete for the Augustana Vikings Biathlon team.

Augustana has the only university biathlon program of this calibre in Canada. Augustana has been the home to many athletes like Yvonne Visser, Jane Isakson and Glen Rupertus who are Canadian Olympic biathletes, or Karin Milliken and Geri Coyne of the National team. There are also Junior World team members like Shayne Hoehn, Nikki Keddie, and Hardy Griesbauer from Augustana as well.

With the support of Gary "Gibber" Gibson, Scott Rogers, Ivar Saugen, Daryl Phillips and Don Rogers the Augustana tradition is continuing. Nikki, Shayne and Hardy are presently in Orskov, Slovakia competing in the World Junior Biathlon Championships. The rest of the team is competing provincially, with an outstanding performance January 21-22 with powerful skiing and impressive shooting. The results were Tim

Ross (1.1), David Leoni (7.3), Amy Ford (1.2), Kristine Saugen (2.1), Erin Phillips (3.5), Mike Ross (1.1) Robert Hele (2.2), Carlos Settle (2.2), Madeline Bouz (1.3), Cindy Brunjten (5.4), Craig Rogers (6.6), and myself (4.5).

This weekend of January 28 to 30 has the team competing at home, racing a dual meet against Saskatchewan with the rest of the Alberta team. The following weekend the team will be in Tofield competing for the Senior Women's World Cup Trials where Cindy, Max and I will rally, in their quest for excellence, for two spots on the Canadian team competing in the two World Cups being held in Hinton and Canmore this March.

Curling News

The Junior Women's team has gone to Lloydminster for the Northern Alberta Playoffs. The team consists of Jodie Beattie, Ginethe Kleinmann, Karen Rawluk and Jenny Dewar. The women's curling team will be competing against 12 other teams, seven of which are from Edmonton. The top three teams in the playoffs will go to provincials in Wetaskiwin.

The Junior Men's team has the weekend off in preparation for the ACAC Winter Regionals in Edmonton on February 4-6. The men's team consists of Dave Kozuska, Shannon Rackette, Sheldon Fuernkrantz and Greg Steiwart. Coach Don Myrehaug said that hopefully all three teams will be heading to the ACAC championships; all are quite competitive and dedicated athletes. Good Luck!
